RICHMOND, Va., May 2 (AP)—Virginia and the entire Fifth Federal Reserve district reported the most successful financing campaign in history as the second war loan drive came to a close last night.

The new order supplements a previous ruling by the coal controller freezing all bituminous coal in transit from the United States and regulating deliveries in Ontario and Quebec. This ruling was announced Friday night.

The announcement said the freezing of anthracite coal became necessary owing the spread of the coal strike in the United States into the anthracite field.

Harmonica Rascals
At Maryland Tomorrow

Borrah Minevitch, whose Harmonica Rascals come to the Maryland theater tomorrow, has parlayed a childhood toy into a brilliant career.

Borrah came to this country at the age of five and for the next nine years sold newspapers to the tune of his beloved harmonica. At fifteen he entered the College of the City of New York, working his way through at all kinds of odd jobs. Some part of every day, though, he managed to devote to his harmonica. During his stay at City College he wrote a thesis on the history of the harmonica which was published by a leading manufacturer of those instruments.

The Harmonica Rascals have developed great comic personalities in addition to fine musicians. At present the Rascals are featuring Sammy Ross, fifty-three-inch midget and 350 pound William John McBride.

"Eagle Squadron" Now
Showing at Garden

One of the really great pictures the war has thus far turned up is now at the Garden theater, where "Eagle Squadron" is playing. The cast includes Robert Stack, Diana Barrymore, Jon Hall, Edgar Barrier and Eddie Albert. The many thrilling sequences depicting air battles include some that are authentic.

The co-feature at the Garden today is "Manila Calling," starring Lloyd Nolan and Carole Landis.

SOMETHING'S GONE AWRY

BY THE LOOKS ON THE FACES OF Laurel and Hardy in the latest M-G-M comedy, "Air Raid Wardens," starting tomorrow at the Maryland theater, you can tell they aren't entirely sympathetic with what Comedian Edgar Kennedy is doing to them. There's a good reason, for in this picture they are air raid wardens seriously bent on doing a good job, whether Kennedy likes it or not.

Cure for Diphtheria Became Universally
Available for Children Fifty Years Ago

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

It was only fifty years ago, in 1893, that Dr. Herman M. Biggs in New York established the first diagnostic laboratory as a branch of a city health department. The idea was germinated by the work of a young man in Berlin named Behring, who had given Dr. Biggs some serum for which he made the then seemingly impossible claim that it would cure a case of diphtheria. After observing the action of diphtheria anti-toxin in Europe, Dr. Biggs cabled to his chief, Dr. William H. Park, of New York: "Diphtheria anti-toxin is a success; begin to produce it."

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

It was two years before, on a Christmas eve, 1891, that young Dr. von Behring ran up the steps of a brick building in Berlin with a syringe full of anti-toxin to give to a desperately sick baby in the Bergmann clinic. The little patient lived, as did many others he treated during the following weeks, and he began producing anti-toxin from sheep in large quantities, so that by the time Dr. Biggs was making his post-graduate tour in Europe, Dr. Behring had many results to show him.

Experiments with Guinea Pigs
But the story goes further back than that because Behring and been for years trying to obtain a cure for diphtheria. He used guinea pigs as the experimental animals because guinea pigs are even more susceptible than human babies to the disease. He tried first injecting his guinea pigs with diphtheria bacilli and attempted to cure them with various chemicals. Most of the guinea pigs died in spite of the chemicals, so the experiment was not a success. But working on the guinea pigs which lived, Dr. Behring found that he could inject them with enormous doses of diphtheria bacilli without producing the disease.

He decided that there was something produced in the blood of injected animals which protected them from subsequent doses. In other words, they had acquired immunity. By using the sheep and the horse, animals which are very immune to diphtheria naturally, and drawing their blood after a period of time, he found that the serum from this blood would protect a weak and susceptible guinea pig from a lethal dose of diphtheria toxin. This serum was the anti-toxin which he used on that Christmas eve and which in 1893 became universally available for children in the United States.

First Step
It seems strange that this reversal of the malignancy of nature was begun only fifty years ago. It was the first step in our treatment of all the infectious diseases. From 1880 to 1890 in New York City diphtheria killed between 800 and 1,000 per 100,000 of the population a year—mostly children. That would mean today that in New York City about 70,000 children would die of diphtheria.

The actual number of deaths from diphtheria in New York and all its boroughs for the past few years has been less than thirty. In 1940 it was 0.1 per 100,000. Or in other words, six persons died in New York of diphtheria in 1941, as against 70,000 if the 1890 rate had prevailed. And those six deaths were probably more due to ignorance and superstition on the part of the parents—letting things go until too late—than to lack of medical skill and alertness.

Questions and Answers

H. L. L.:—What causes the growth of a cyst and what should be done when one has already started? I have had one removed from my neck and believe another has started on the other side.

Answer: The kind of cyst you describe (i.e., on the neck) is probably a wen, which is caused by a stoppage in the duct of one of the grease glands of the skin. Such cysts are easily removed by simple surgery under local anesthesia.

R. M. H.:—I have heard that a warm shower followed by a cold one is hard on a person's heart. Is this true?

Answer: No, on the contrary, it is very good for the heart because it constitutes a massage of the circulation. The warm water dilates the blood vessels of the skin and brings the blood away from inter-

Some Refreshing Observations

EVIDENCE that not all of our college professors are radical and visionary, particularly with respect to post-war concepts, but that some have due respect for the realities is given in an outspoken article by Dr. James Bryant Conant, president of Harvard, in the current Atlantic Monthly.

To begin with, Dr. Conant says we can hardly plan the role of America in the post-war world until we know "who the main actor is going to be." We must decide, in short, he points out, what kind of nation we are going to be. And this, he insists, our more enthusiastic internationalists to the contrary notwithstanding, entails no such choice as between "isolation and internationalism." The choice simply is among ways of co-operating reasonably in world affairs without losing our national character.

Moreover, says President Conant, the old fashioned reactionary is gone, and the European-minded radical impossible. In place of either we have in dominant position the real forgotten man—the "American radical."

As what sort of individual is he? He believes in equality of opportunity and does not waste his time trying to equalize rewards. He does not like federal subsidizers of education. He is very sensitive about individual rights, as opposed to the police power of the state. He believes that the federal government must act in some situations, but he seeks first to define government as local, state and regional. He opposes the swollen power of groups, whether they represent labor, agriculture or capital. He is not sympathetic to the hereditary passing of economic power. He asks the states, not the nation, to bear a major burden in helping the returned soldier. He demands, as President Conant has done in his own reports, an overhauling of educational methods.

It is rather refreshing to read timely expressions like this from such a source.

V-Mail Is Not Used Enough

THERE'S SOMETHING about the filling in of a form that makes a person more careful than he is when writing the same facts on ordinary paper, which may be the reason why comparatively few V-Mail letters go astray in the navy.

In most cases, V-Mail letters are addressed adequately and legibly.

They make everybody happy. They reach their destination as quickly as possible. They give the mail clerks no trouble. And they don't bounce back on the senders for a more complete or more legible address.

In a few short months, more than 10,000,000 V-Mail letters have been delivered, and if the navy has its way there will soon be a switch of enough users of ordinary mail to make the V-Mail total more than 20,000,000.

The Navy department is campaigning, ashore and afloat, for the greater use of V-Mail, establishing No. 1 priority for it and setting up small portable V-Mail stations wherever possible.

Recently one navy post office exhibited a day's pile of misdirected letters which did not contain a single piece of V-Mail. On other days, according to the postal clerk, V-Mail had appeared among the "Nixies"—but on the short end of a 100-to-1 rate compared with ordinary mail and air mail.

Similar reports in praise of V-mail have been received from ships and shore stations which the Navy department has contacted in the current campaign. Posters advising the men in the armed forces to use V-Mail now appear on bulletin boards from coast to coast and across the seven seas.

The V-Mail must go through, says the navy, which is why it has been given No. 1 priority—on a par with ammunition.

Press Ban Removal Doubly Important

COMING UP MAY 18 at Hot Springs, Va., is the postponed conference of the United Nations called chiefly to discuss food, but almost certain to delve into international currency controls and foreign trade generally. Tentative agreements reached there may have much effect upon economic stability in the United States.

This makes it doubly important that the ban on reporters ordered by President Roosevelt be abrogated and that the American people be informed fully of all developments at the swank resort hotel at Hot Springs.

It has been estimated that after the war, the United States Army and Navy will demobilize at least 7,500,000 men, the manufacturing industries 5,000,000 and the government 2,000,000. That is a minimum of about 15,000,000 jobs to be created for the peace era if widespread unemployment is to be averted.

America will depend heavily upon revived foreign trade to create new jobs. Foreign trade will be complicated. The United States is importing many metals it will not require after the conflict ceases. The synthetic rubber industry will cancel the import of natural rubber. Synthetics are rapidly taking the place of silk. Sugar and vegetable oils formerly imported are being produced domestically to a large extent.

What is to be the answer to the problem of a continuing flow of imports, if this is necessary so that American products may be purchased in foreign lands? It is certain to be no easy answer, and agreements for postwar trade should certainly not be entered into behind closed doors, with the American press excluded from access to the facts.

It is unlikely, of course, that the press can be excluded. Fortunately, there are newspapers in the United States that will find a method of getting the news, and that will print it.

Enemies of Mankind Are Being Harnessed

AN OUTSTANDING DEVELOPMENT in science is the fact that chemical workers are harnessing for human service a horde of ancient enemies of mankind. There are the microorganisms, the bacteria and molds which exist in countless varieties and which have been attacking man and his products through the ages.

One result of this research has been the development of penicillin, a new drug a hundred times as powerful as sulfa-linamide and less toxic in its after-effects. It is the product of a mold found on citrus fruits. Other molds under investigation are those on bread, fruits, cotton, grain and leather. The intestines of insects may be useful because their digestive apparatus makes chemical changes in a wide variety of vegetable matter. The cockroach, the grasshopper and the termite are potentially important as sources of digestive bacteria which, under control, will contribute to the welfare of man.

These invisible micro organisms have slain more human beings than all the catastrophes and all the wars of history. Science has learned to make them work for man with growing success.

That old tourist slogan, "See Naples and die," seems to be more appropriate than ever.

The Browser's Bookshelf

By MARSHALL MASLIN

That great novelist, Lion Feuchtwanger, is still able after all his bitter experiences of the past ten years to write brilliantly and powerfully and neither his personal misfortune nor the tragedy of his race have dimmed his ability to describe a complete society and to create rounded and breathing human beings. His "Double, Double Toil and Trouble" (Viking Press) is the story of a clairvoyant named Oscar Lautenschlag who climbed to great power in the Nazi blood-band and crept into Hitler's confidence and trust. It was he who suggested the burning of the Reichstag to one of the Fuehrer's lieutenants; it was he who insinuated into Hitler's burning mind the blood-purge that rid him of elements that were becoming distasteful to him. But Oscar made enemies, as all the greedy brutal giant-midgets in the Nazi group did in the end he died in a false execution, "killed by the enemies of the regime."

A strange character, this Oscar Lautenschlag—half honestly telepathic—boastful and lustful and stupidly cunning. He fell in love with a decent girl named Kathie and because of Kathie he attempted to win the release of a brilliant half-brother Paul Cramer who had been a bitter opponent of Hitler and Hitler's ideas. One of his polemics was an unleashed analysis of Hitler's bad German. And because Oscar dared to ask clemency for a man who had dared to sneer at the Fuehrer's noble German, Oscar himself became suspect and was trapped into even deeper treason to the Leader. Thus died Oscar and men who were even worse than he remained on the narrow tight-rope and clung to power.

The subtle mind of Lion Feuchtwanger makes few mistakes in the creation of plot and character. He destroys Lautenschlag through the one morsel of decency in his twisted soul. (The clairvoyant in the novel was suggested by the life of Hitler's own soothsayer.) "Double, Double" is a thrilling, solid novel and no political pamphlet—Feuchtwanger could have placed it in any corrupt society of the last two thousand years and it would have been true.

A clergyman friend of the Browser tells him that Sinclair Lewis' "Olden Planish" may have had its genesis in a slashing article printed in the Nation or the New Republic about twenty years ago. It was called "The Fat Boys" and it was an ironic exposure of certain professional money-raising secretaries who roll smoothly around the country on gold ball-bearing expense accounts.

Jean Burton, who wrote the excellent "Sir Richard Burton's Wife" a year or so ago, has collaborated with Jan Fortuna on a life of "Elizabeth Ney" (Knopf), the fabulous first sculptress of Europe who was born 110 years ago in Munster, Germany, who put Europe behind her at the age of 38 and came to Texas with her husband, Edmund Montgomery. An extraordinary human being and her life is honestly written, without sloppy sentiment. Miss Fortuna gathered all the material in Texas and in Germany.

Mignon G. Eberhart's nineteenth century mystery story "The Man Next Door" (Random House) betrays no slackening in the clever lady's ability to contrive bloodshed and terror and wind up all her characters and the reader in a tangle of clue and counter-clue. A tale of sabotage and blackmail in Washington itself. If you are interested in another detective tale, more of a toughie than Miss Eberhart's, try Robert Reeves' "Guiltless Smith: Detective" (Houghton Mifflin) or murder in the tramp jungles. Why was Danny the bum killed? Who-dun-it? Did the stripteuse? Did the gangster gun-runner? Did the professor? Was Danny the runaway son of a millionaire? You'll never, never guess! Rough and tumble but interesting. Author Reeves is now Buck Private Reeves, 30 years old and getting bald. . . . Enough from Marsh Maslin.

Gas-Rubber Fight Calls for Cabinet, Mark Sullivan Says

By MARK SULLIVAN

Here are two men—Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, and Rubber Administrator William M. Jeffers. Both are first class men. Mr. Patterson is a man anyone could like and respect. If you didn't happen to like him, you would still respect him. If Mr. Patterson came to a judgment on something he had studied, and you didn't happen to know the subject, you would tend to take Mr. Patterson's judgment.

Jeffers is an excellent man—a little on the flamboyant side, perhaps, but still a thoroughly competent, forceful public official, deserving public confidence. Now these two men differ on a matter to conduct of the war—differ so diametrically that one of them just must be utterly wrong. They differ because each wants the same thing. The thing both want has a technical name, "critical component items." That means certain materials and gadgets—for simplicity say the thing both want is steel.

Mr. Patterson wants steel (and other things) to increase production of high octane gas. He says the army simply must have more octane gas to keep as many war planes in the air as we ought to have. Mr. Jeffers wants steel (and other materials) to increase facilities for producing synthetic rubber. There just isn't enough for both. One or the other must get along without.

Not a Presidential Job

Which is right? This writer can't say. The public can't say. In the set-up of the administration, only President Roosevelt has authority to say. But it ought not to be up to the president to say. For a dozen reasons. Neither he nor any other one man has time to study the facts of the scores of similar questions, many highly technical, that come up constantly. Right now, the threatened coal strike is on his hands—to handle that strike is alone a full-time job for several days. Moreover, the president is away for considerable periods—the day he took action in the coal case, he was just back from a sixteen day trip to Mexico and throughout the country.

The desirable remedy is a commonplace of Washington talk. There should be a group of men to make over-all decisions—call it a war cabinet. This is often talked about but never eventuates. Such a group have decided the Patterson-Jeffers dispute before it arose. Such a group indeed would have so managed the war effort from the beginning, would have made such decisions and such a program in advance, that the present controversy would never have arisen. It would never have come before a public which can only be disturbed by it.

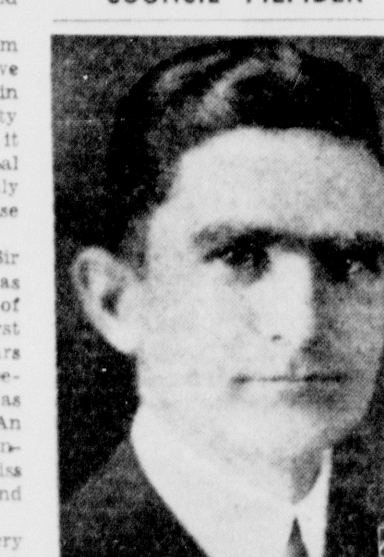

Longer Tire Shortage

There is another need, to meet situations which cannot escape being laid before the public. If the present controversy is decided against Mr. Jeffers and rubber, the public will be asked to get along without tires for a longer time. It is desirable this request for more sacrifice be made in a way that will convince the public, that will get instant and cheerful assent.

The request ought to be made by, or okayed by, a body recognized by the public as completely disinterested, completely nonpartisan. This need is inherent. It has arisen several times. After the Pearl Harbor disaster, President Roosevelt recognized that any statement made on the authority of the administration alone would run risk of being regarded by the public as self-justifying. He turned to the supreme court, borrowed Mr. Justice Roberts, whose judicial standing was so recognized that his report was accepted as impartial.

In similar circumstances, when

COUNCIL MEMBER

STATE SENATOR JOSEPH M. GEORGE (D-Queen Anne's) was named one of the members of the Maryland Legislative Council at the close of the 1943 session. The council, composed of fourteen members of the House and Senate, is charged with a continuing study of state and county problems and preparation of new legislation during the two-year recess of the General Assembly. George, a native and life-long resident of Sudersville, is serving his first term in the state senate. He was the fourth of his family to serve as a county commissioner of Queen Anne's county.

NO BONES IN THE CUPBOARD FOR MOTHER HUBBARD'S DOG

Official Pessimism on U-Boat Sinkings Not Wholly Justified, Paul Mallon Says

By PAUL MALLON

THE RUBBER problem first arose a year ago, Mr. Roosevelt turned again to the supreme court. He asked Mr. Chief Justice Stone to make a report, but Mr. Stone felt that the Supreme Court ought not to make a practice of going outside its function.

Baruch Understood

When Mr. Roosevelt turned to Mr. Bernard M. Baruch, whose disinterested standing was so well understood that the public accepted his report as impartial, his recommendations as necessary.

What is needed, in the interest of the administration and of the public, is an authoritative fact-finder and judgment-giver. Such an authority could be made up partly of persons within the administration, partly of persons outside. There are men whose presence in such a group, and whose assent to a joint statement, would assure impartiality.

Such men as Representative James W. Wadsworth, of New York, and Senator Warren Austin, of Vermont, who are Republicans but have the respect of Democrats; who differ from the president on domestic matters, but on war matters have been with him or ahead of him; and such Democrats as ex-Governor Alfred E. Smith, Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, and Mr. James A. Farley.

Ice Cream Here And There

From the Christian Science Monitor

First he walks, then he talks, and the first two words that he puts together are ice cream. That is, if he's an American youngster. From then on, it's his favorite dessert. And now he thinks of it—mountains of it—when he's fighting in Africa, or building airfields in the jungles.

The story is told of a marine in Guadalcanal who discovered an ice cream freezer. There was high excitement in the camp. Someone for ice which he found in an ice-house abandoned by the Japanese. Everyone fought for a chance to turn the freezer.

There was a gallon and a half to be divided between eighty-five Marines. It wasn't much. It wasn't frozen very stiff, "but it was the best thing we ate on the island," vowed one marine.

American fliers in Britain have discovered an ingenious way to make their favorite dessert. They mix the ice cream in a large tin can and anchor it in the gunners compartment of a Flying Fortress. Soaring high over enemy territory, it is well shaken and frozen to perfection. Upon return to base, a successful raid is celebrated in true American style.

Ice cream on the home front is a bit on the scarce side now, with heavy whipping cream off the menu for the duration. But wars don't last forever. Someday again there'll be plenty of strawberry-chocolate-and-vanilla, or what have you, in all those wonderful varieties that stagger imagination and memory and tease the palate. Not that it's important at all. It's just pleasant to think about.

WASHINGTON, May 2 —

Thicker than a convoy smoke screen, have been the government's conflicting, confusion and impenetrable announcements from the vital submarine war front.

One day the Nazi subs are such a menace that we are losing the war; next day, they were a menace last year but have not been recently.

Not even Navy Secretary Knox and Senate War Truth-Seeker Truman can wholly agree. In their headlined spat, Truman finally made Knox come around and admit that we suffered a 12,000,000 gross tons loss—but the argument was obviously a postmortem, because it dealt with last year.

Neither Truman nor Knox offered any figures as to what has been happening since then or really since the spurge of Nazi sinkings along our coast a year ago.

Oil Losses Heavy

Fuel sequesterers Ickes indicated to a congressional committee that oil represents two-thirds of our exports to North Africa and our losses at sea in this commodity have been heavy. But Assistant Navy Secretary Forrestal has testified there have been no sinkings of any consequence within 400 or 500 miles of the British coast for quite a long time.

First understandable truth that I have seen on this completely muddled controversial issue since the start of the war, was in a speech Tuesday—not by Knox or a navy man or by a congressman—but by high Army General Brehon Somervell.

In a few obscure words, he told the United States Chamber of Commerce that we have lost many weeks back that ninety-five percent of our goods to Russia has been getting through.

Apparently, our most important war goods transported in convoys has been getting through satisfactorily—or better. The heavy gross tonnage sinkings which are being announced represent largely the stray ships operating individually or coastwise sometime back and not containing the most important war material. Also, most of the tonnage figures include sinkings by planes and mines.

The sinking of a single ship, is, of course, a menace. But not a bit of evidence has been offered to the public—and none exists that I know of—to justify the pessimistic attitude that some officials have intermittently taken.

Ground Schedules Delayed

Everything you hear these days makes the end of the war seem farther off. The part of Gen. Somervell's speech which got the headlines was his amazing announcement that our ground force production schedules have been delayed twenty-five per cent by temporary shortages of materials, that our allies armies will not be fully equipped until near the end of this year, and our own army late next year.

Common Washington expert gossip (naturally not confirmed in any official quarter) is that the big invasion second front logically could be expected in the late summer or early fall, although a limited invasion effort might be started at any time.

Only hope for an early conclusion is that Hitler will crack, and no one has much of a line on that possibility.

No Separate Peace for Stalin

The less-than-satisfactory state of diplomatic congeniality with Russia has caused some people to fear again Stalin may seek a separate peace which would take care of his own interests. Not on your life!

The complete eradication of Nazism and Fascism is a Russian necessity. There has been a long war. Fascism was conceived by Mussolini to crush Communism and the fight waged in Italy for fifteen years before this war began. Then it was transported to Germany and finally Spain.

Stalin's type of dictatorship cannot live in the same world with Fascism. He is too much of a practical man to make any peace as long as a single fascist has a pistol left in hand in Europe.

Back in the Drawer

The Senate Foreign Relations committee meets once in a while to discuss the post-war pledges proposed in the Ball-Burton-Hatch Hill bill and then softly puts it back in the drawer. They put it farther back at the last meeting after reading of the Russian-Polish controversy.

Even some of the so-called isolationists would like to perfect some kind of post war statement of policy, but if the resolution is to have any importance at all, it must touch such red-hot controversies as India, Russia, Poland, etc. Any action at all by the Senate is extremely unlikely.

Goose and Golden Egg

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Assistant Attorney General Clark, addressing a special meeting of the American Business Congress at New York the other day, told his hearers that the department of Justice is determined "not to permit reestablishment of the cartel system."

He warned that post-war access to raw materials and markets might be "controlled by a small group which will set up its own trade barriers by private agreement." He asserted that it is impossible to produce such items as electric lamps, glass bottles, aluminum pots, a pair of spectacles or synthetic rubber "without the permission of a private group which has usurped power over industry," added that "some of our more tightly-held monopolies of patents and know-how are being broken as information is diffused to meet war needs, and declared that the one way to prevent suppression of such new products as plastics, plywood, etc., is to keep production uncontrolled and the new industries competitive, thus forcing old industries to compete with the new.

One or two observations seem in order. The first is that while we all instinctively oppose monopoly, it is easy to forget the basic fact that true monopoly consists of depriving the public of something it heretofore had enjoyed freely, not in controlling a new product or a new process. The second is that in an entirely laudable desire to bestow

Miners' Strike Is Due to Mistakes, Lawrence Says

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, May 1 — John L. Lewis has maneuvered the Roosevelt administration into a difficult and embarrassing situation which won't be disposed of at all by the attitude of miners in the next few days. For the controversy is much more far-reaching than appears on the surface.

There are some observers who see only a powerful labor leader defying the war labor board and the government. There are some who think that the exchange of communications between the president and Lewis covers the controversy. But actually there have been some serious mistakes in policy by the administration which Lewis has been quick to use to the advantage of his cause.

It was a mistake, for instance, for the president to issue his executive order, now known as the "Hold-the-Line" order. The War Labor Board's public members feel so strongly about it that they sent a memorandum to the executive offices a few days ago asking that some of their powers in handling wage increases be restored.

Order Will Fail

Mr. Lewis knows that the "Hold-the-Line" order cannot possibly be maintained, because the CIO and the A. F. of L. are as bitterly opposed to it as he is, and there is no doubt that some modifications are coming. Mr. Lewis may be able to capitalize on those changes and appear to be the man who forced a change in the Byrnes-Roosevelt "Hold-the-Line" order. His prestige in the labor world will go up correspondingly.

It is a fact, of course, that Mr. Lewis has ignored the War Labor Board, but he has also said plainly that his reason is that it operates with "political limitations," which means that it is directed or influenced by Mr. Byrnes and the president. Mr. Lewis wants the War Labor Board to operate independently and, while he thinks it is prejudiced, he really means it is influenced against him.

Now, however, it becomes apparent that some change in handling wage matters is in prospect. Lewis will get something in the way of an increase. It may be figured on the basis of the so-called "portal to portal" method of computing wage rates which was recently upheld in a court decision. It may come out of the latest effort to discover costs of living in mining communities.

Picture of Victory

But whatever be the means used to increase wages, Lewis will be able to view the result as a substantial victory for his tactics. His idea has been to go to the very edge of precipitating a nation-wide strike and then recede. He may even permit the so-called unauthorized walk-outs to go on here and there, but the general effect created in labor circles will be that Lewis has taken his time about ordering the men back and that he does so only after he feels sure some concessions are coming his way.

One concession may have escaped general notice. It is the administration's order to OPA to send investigators to check up on prices in selected mining communities. This affords a way out for the president and the War Labor Board, for up to now no such evidence was permitted relating to specific situations.

Also when the "Hold-the-Line" order is modified, it will unquestionably allow the War Labor Board to determine "inequities" and "inequalities." This means a flexibility which gives the labor union leaders a chance to earn their salaries by being able to agitate for something all the time. It means also, on the other hand, that there are some legitimate "inequities" and "inequalities" which ought to be ironed out, especially if the inflationary trends brought on by the continued payment of time-and-a-half and double-time keeps billions of dollars of purchasing power in circulation against the diminishing quantities of goods available.

Lower Paid Workers Hit

"The lower paid workers of the country are the ones who are going to be hardest hit as inflation reaches slowly but surely into the purchasing power of the country. Black markets are having some effect on the opportunity to get needed supplies and articles involved in living costs.

There is no doubt also that certain "inequalities" exist in the price levels and that if the wage levels are modified to permit increases, certain price adjustments upward will have to be made. The sad truth is that the battle against the present-day inflation was lost in June, 1940, when the present spiral of wages and prices was permitted to develop. The administration didn't act in time, and it will be compelled now to see more inflation before the trend can really be effectively curbed.

New Sickness and Accident Plan Pays $25 Weekly Benefits

Costs Only $12 a Year — Down Payment $2.50 — Hospital Benefit Included

Newark, N. J.—The 57-year-old North American Accident Insurance Company announces a new plan that pays $25 a week for both stated accidents and sickness. Plus an additional $25 a week for any accident requiring hospital confinement. Yet the total cost is only $12 a year. The purpose of this new Premier Limited Double Duty Policy is to bring sickness and accident protection within the reach of men and women who do not have large savings with which to meet sudden doctor or hospital bills, or lost income.

This new plan also has a double-indemnity feature covering travel accidents. You receive $50 a week if disabled by an accident in a bus, taxicab, street car, train, etc., and $75 a week if the accident requires hospital confinement. There is another new special clause that pays cash for doctor bills, even minor accidents such as a cut finger. Thus all accidents are provided for. In case of death by a common accident, the policy pays one thousand dollars cash to your family. Two thousand dollars if caused by a travel accident. In addition, it covers many common sicknesses such as pneumonia, cancer, appendicitis, etc., paying $25 weekly benefits whether confined to home or hospital.

The entire cost is only $12 a year, and that applies to men and women between the ages of 16 and 69. For people between the ages of 69 and 75 the cost is only $15 a year. No medical examination is required.

North American Accident Insurance Company of Chicago is one of America's great insurance companies, the largest and oldest exclusive health and accident insurance company in this country. It has paid out more than $30,000,000 to grateful policyholders when they needed help most. North American's policy has been approved by State Insurance Departments.

Men and women who would like full details about this new plan are urged to write a letter or postcard for a revealing booklet called "Cash or Sympathy." This booklet is absolutely free. It will come by ordinary mail, without charge or obligation of any kind. No one will call to deliver it. We suggest you get a copy of this free booklet by writing North American Accident Insurance Co., 449 Title Building, Newark, New Jersey—Adv.

President Says

party, the president said, to a request for creation of the War Labor Board to settle any disputes which could not be adjusted through collective bargaining. But he asserted that the national officers of the UMW had declined to have anything to do with the board's fact-finding in the miner-operator dispute over a wage increase and other issues.

Furthermore, he said, the UMW officials refused to participate when asked to attend a WLB hearing last Monday.

The text of the chief executive's speech was handed to reporters page by page from the duplicating machines just before Lewis, according to his New York office, was scheduled to consult with his policy committee in New York.

War at Critical Stage

Mr. Roosevelt declared that the war had reached a new critical phase in which we have moved into "active and continuing battle with our enemies," after years of preparation. Reporting on recent inspection tour of the nation's war facilities, he said he had seen thousands of workers on production lines and men being trained for battle, and everywhere he found "great eagerness to get on with the war."

Apparently for contrast with the position of striking miners, he told how he had seen men and women working long hours at difficult jobs and living under difficult conditions without complaint.

Will Harvest Crops

He said he had seen countless acres of newly-plowed fields, where farmers are planting crops to feed our armed forces, the civilian population and our allies. Those crops will be harvested, Mr. Roosevelt said.

He said he had seen, too, thousands of soldiers who were green recruits last autumn and who have now matured into "hardened fighting men" in splendid physical condition.

"The American people," he said, "have accomplished a miracle."

At that point he led into his statement that the war effort must not be hindered by any individual or leaders of any group at home.

Mr. Roosevelt made it clear that he feels "the responsibility for the crisis that we now face squarely on the national officers of the United Mine Workers."

May Not Work Today

Until Lewis's announcement there was no clear-cut indication in the coal fields of the response that might be expected tomorrow to the government's appeal for uninterrupted production if it was not backed up by the nod of the mine workers' chieftain. There had been straws in the wind but little more—eleven Pennsylvania locals of the UMW voted to remain idle until they heard from Lewis, while one local of 350 men voted to resume work.

Several governors had joined in the appeal to the miners to resume their work, and Administrator Ickes had reported a heartening response to his "all to service" telegrams to the operators.

Mr. Roosevelt told the nation that if necessary troops would be stationed at mine mouths or in coal towns to protect miners.

He declared:

"Tonight, in the face of a crisis of serious proportions in the coal industry, I say again that the spirit of this nation is good. I know that the American people will not tolerate any threat offered to their government by anyone."

"I believe the coal miners will not continue the strike against the government. I believe that the coal miners themselves as Americans will not fail to heed the clear call to duty. Like all good Americans they will march shoulder to shoulder with their armed forces to victory."

Browns Win Pair From White Sox

Labbs's Homer in Eleventh Decides Opener; Sundra Cops Finale

CHICAGO, May 2 (AP)—An eleven-inning homer by Outfielder Chet Laabs in the opener and Steve Sundra's steady seven-hit pitching in the nightcap gave the St. Louis Browns a double-header over the White Sox, 3 to 2 and 5 to 1, before 4,525 fans today and enabled the St. Louisians to return home tonight at the 500 mark.

Rookie Gordon Maltzberger, who had pitched shutout ball after replacing Thornton Lee at the start of the seventh, was the victim of Laab's homer. In a second effort to make a normal salary clause replace the $1 a year contract he's now operating under, Lee allowed two runs and four hits in six frames before his convalescent arm tightened. Bob Muncie, who pitched the last two innings for the Browns, was the winner. Johnny Niggeling was excused after a strong nine frames, in which he allowed five hits.

The Browns sowed up the nightcap by scoring four runs, all of them unearned, off Johnny Humphries in the first two innings. The scores:

Dr. Garry Myers Opposes Changes In Family Names

Parents Should Try To Make Children Proud of Their Ancestry

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Over a period of several years, mothers and fathers have written me to ask if, for the sake of their children, they should not change their family name. They say they want to save their children from the sort of suffering they had to endure over their name when they were children.

In a few instances I have advised in the affirmative but always have added that it would be a greater victory for these parents and the personality and moral character of their children if the parents could build up in their children a pride in their family name and the cultures of their respective nationalities.

Shameful Bigotry

Always such cases distress me terribly. They make me so ashamed of the bigotry of the rest of us Americans who have simpler names and suppose our family names are acceptable. What is the matter with us that we and our children should cause any other person in our midst to be ashamed of his name or the nationality of his name or the nationality background it suggests?

This problem has existed for years and years. Now that we are at war, it has centered most strongly about the names which suggest the nationality of those whose forbears came from countries at war with the United Nations.

Pride of Ancestry

To parents who with their children are embarrassed by their family name, let me entreat you to try to build up in yourself a pride in your ancestry and their culture and pass this on to your children. Show your children how America has afforded you and them the opportunity to build on this culture and through it to contribute to our country's greatness.

Right now, I wish our public schools, especially those in which several nationalities are represented, would put on assembly programs which portray the cultures of the various nationalities, their folklore, art and music.

Pronunciation

Some teachers have been at fault in not disciplining themselves to pronounce correctly the various names of children. Some do worse. They even try deliberately to pronounce a "foreign" name in a way that others will laugh at it. How very foolish to do so!

I wish every teacher would set herself the task at the beginning of each school term to learn to pronounce accurately, and to remember the names of all her pupils and students as early as possible, treating them as real persons.

Soiling Parent Problems

Q My nine-year-old boy objects to having to come into the house when the street lights appear.

A Tell him just once that it is no business of yours what other parents do but this is the way "we do." Then prove your word is dependable.

Q We live half a mile from the center of the town. Our four-year-old boy, every time he is out alone goes down there and people who know him bring him back. We have tried every sort of reasoning, whipping and deprivation—all in vain.

A Assuming you wish to save the life of your child, you or a competent substitute should always be with him when he is out of doors till he learns not to run away. It does no good to punish him after he is found or brought home. The time to punish him effectively is the moment he crosses the forbidden line. Show him tree, pole or crack in the walk beyond which he must not go unprotected. The moment he does, spank or paddle him soundly. The pain must be immediate and without exception. Also attract some playmates his age to your home, with their parents' approval or go with your child to theirs.

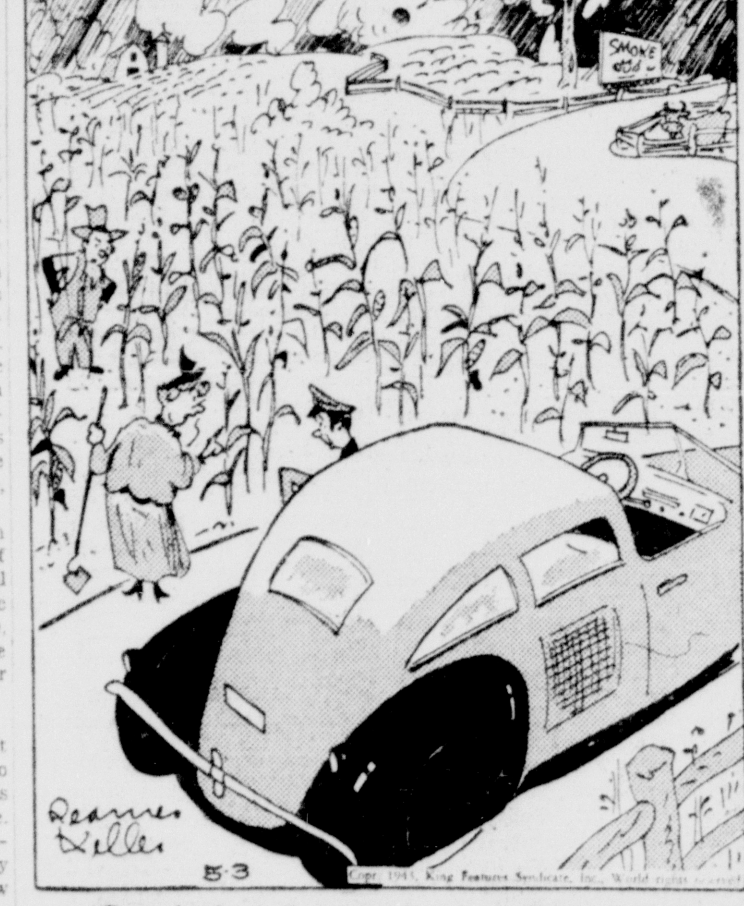

New Jersey high school youths will help farmers harvest cranberry and other perishable crops this year under a state-sponsored student service plan set up on an experimental basis last year.

1943 Community Chest Opens with Meeting Tonight

Senator Millard E. Tydings Is Guest Speaker; Goal Is $58,755

Cumberland's 1943 Community Chest campaign to raise $58,755 will be formally opened this evening with a dinner meeting at Central Y. M. C. A., at which time United States Senator Millard E. Tydings will be the principal speaker.

Sen. Tydings, realizing the importance of the community chest, accepted the invitation to come here and open the drive and will touch upon the work of the chest agencies from a national viewpoint during war time.

Lottig To Preside
Roy C. Lottig, general campaign chairman, will preside at the meeting and will present William C. Walsh, attorney general, who will introduce Sen. Tydings.

Other speakers will be Joseph K. Trenton, "This is a Job for a Salesman," Everett R. Johnson, "Goals and the Gold Star Award," E. M. Brown, "Campaign Working Tools," Harry A. Porch, "This is Everybody's Job."

The Rev. Edwin W. Saylor, pastor of the First Baptist church, and president of the ministerial association will give the invocation.

Arrangements have been made to seat several hundred persons in the balcony, who are expected to attend to hear Sen. Tydings. Plans are also made to broadcast a part of the program. The meeting will begin at 6 p. m. and will conclude at 8 p. m.

Eleven Agencies
The local Community Chest is composed of eleven agencies, each of which receives a portion of total money collected. The eleven agencies are Allegheny County League for Crippled Children; Associated Charities; Allegheny hospital; Baby Welfare league; Cumberland Boy Scouts; Cumberland Girl Scouts; Jewish Welfare; Keating Memorial Day Nursery; Salvation Army; Travelers Aid Society; Central Young Men's Clothing Association.

Last evening the Club of Human Relations gave its weekly broadcast, known as the Town Meeting of the Air, to the promotion of the chest effort. Speakers included Roy C. Lottig, James W. Bishop, Dr. Frank U. Davis, Porter D. Collins, Miss Jeanette Bonig and Robert Kaplan, moderator. Short talks were made and a discussion of chest agencies and their activities followed. This was the last Town Meeting of the Air broadcast until early in September.

Invalid Girl Sets Envious Record in Cookie Sale

Bunny Haller, Member of Girl Scout Troop 10, Sells 145 Boxes

Despite the handicap of being an invalid, Bunny Haller, 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Haller, 20 Ridgeway terrace, set an envious record for selling cookies during the Girl Scout cookie sale just ended.

Bunny, who was injured at birth and has been an invalid ever since, unable to use her arms or legs, has been a member of Girl Scout Troop 10 since September 1942, and although she cannot attend meetings in East Side school is just as interested in scouting as her more fortunate friends.

Although she must remain in bed day in and day out, Bunny hasn't let that spoil her smile and her interest in what is going on about her. She cannot attend school but she doesn't allow that to handicap her either since she is tutored by a local school teacher.

As a pretty good example of her interest in scouting, take the recent Girl Scout cookie sale as an example. Using a telephone placed conveniently for her by her mother, Bunny was able to sell 145 boxes of cookies. Two cents from the cost of each box went to her troop's treasury so that made a total of $290. And during the Christmas season Bunny turned on her personality again to dispose of twenty-eight boxes of Christmas cards, also for the troop.

Like the salesgirl she is, Bunny wants to thank everybody who helped her and she also suggested that everybody support the Community Chest drive which begins today. The Girl Scouts are one of the eleven member agencies and Bunny really has the Girl Scouts at heart.

Second War Loan Drive Is Expected To Be Success

Final Figures for This Region Will Not Be Available until Saturday

Although final figures on the results of the Second War Loan drive in Allegheny and Garrett counties, comprising Region 1 of the state of Maryland, will not be available until May 8, local members of the War Finance Committee estimated yesterday that the quota for the region will be exceeded.

Allegheny county's quota in the campaign which ended Saturday was $2,240,400 and Garrett county's was $237,500.

Following the close of the drive, Charles A. Piper, chairman of the War Finance Committee said "it is very gratifying to see the people of Western Maryland respond so well to the Second War Loan drive. Since the beginning of the war both Allegheny and Garrett counties have made an enviable record in the task of raising funds to finance it."

"However," he continued, "since the war has not ended, our job of raising funds through the sale of government bonds is still with us. Our committee is confident that the people of Western Maryland will continue to maintain a good record. Series 'E', 'F' and 'G' war bonds and the treasury series 'A' tax notes (designed for the payment of corporation taxes and the investment of funds up to three years) will be available daily at all banks throughout the county. Series 'E' war bonds are also available at post offices and other agencies."

Sales of the United States Treasury seven-eighths certificate of indebtedness, the treasury two percent bonds of 1952-50 and the treasury two-and-one-half percent bonds of 1969-64 were discontinued Saturday, but committee members emphasized that all sales of series "E", "F" and "G" bonds up to and including May 8 will count in the campaign.

Civil Air Patrol Is Placed Under Army Supervision

Executive Order Applies to All Qualified and Active Members

By executive order, signed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, all squadrons of the Civil Air Patrol have been placed under the direction of the Army Air Corps. This removes the CAP from the office of Civilian Defense, it is explained.

Capt. Arthur Lyem, commander of CAP Squadron No. 331, this city, said last night that the immediate effect on the local squadron is not definite, although there is reason to believe that a War department order will be received by the local squadron giving full army status to the local fliers. The order, if and when it is received, Capt. Lyem said, will apply to active and qualified officers and members of the CAP squadron or its flights.

First announcement of the new status of the CAP was received Thursday when the third monthly staff meeting of Maryland Wing No. 33, Civil Air Patrol was held in Frederick. A number of local CAP officers attended.

Major Arthur C. Hyde, wing commander, attended and announced plans for a statewide inspection and maneuver Sunday, June 6, to be held at Westminster. At that time new CAP airport will be dedicated. The dedication is expected to be attended by Governor Herbert R. O'Connor, Colonel Earle Johnson, National CAP Commander, Mayor Howard Jackson of Baltimore and other noted persons.

On Saturday evening prior to the dedication a dance and buffet supper will be held for members of the CAP of Maryland.

Body Discovered On River Island Is Identified
